

THE SCHOOL OF NURSING
AT THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA AT CHAPEL HILL
PRESENTS THE 2005 ETHNIC MINORITY VISITING SCHOLAR LECTURE

“On the Outside Looking In:

Language Barriers & Access to Learning, Mentoring and Success as a Minority in Nursing”

by SeonAe Yeo, PhD, RN

Associate Professor of Nursing & Family Medicine,
University of Michigan at Ann Arbor
President, Asian American Pacific Islander Nurses Association

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 2005

4-5 P.M.

RECEPTION TO FOLLOW

SCHOOL OF NURSING

{CARRINGTON HALL ADDITION}

LOWER LEVEL

DR. FRANCES HILL FOX AUDITORIUM

DR. SEONAE YEO earned her PhD in health sciences from Tokyo University in 1982 before accepting her current appointment with the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.

Yeo is known for her research examining exercise during pregnancy and has published extensively in prestigious interdisciplinary journals.

In addition to serving as a faculty associate for the Center for Japanese Studies and the Center for Korean Studies at the University of Michigan, Yeo has dedicated her leadership to the Asian American community as president of the Asian American Pacific Islander Nurses Association.

As a nurse practitioner, nurse-midwife and a public health nurse in Japan, Michigan and Illinois, Yeo has provided care to women of all ages and multiple ethnicities.

ABOUT THE ETHNIC MINORITY VISITING SCHOLAR LECTURE

The Ethnic Minority Visiting Scholar Lecture series was established at the School of Nursing in 2000 as an initiative to highlight the research and contributions of ethnic minority nurse scholars. The lecture brings outstanding specialists, educators, clinical researchers and directors to Chapel Hill for discussion of timely nursing matters affecting ethnic and minority populations.

