Welcome to this new edition of Adjunct Faculty Community Connections! This newsletter highlights the achievements, appointments, and reappointments of our adjunct faculty members so our SON faculty and adjunct faculty can become better acquainted and form stronger partnerships. We greatly appreciate the rich diversity of expertise and the many contributions that our approximately 140 adjunct faculty members bring to the SON. Adjunct faculty members contribute to every aspect of our School’s mission by giving numerous volunteer hours in various roles such as clinical preceptors, lecturers, curriculum or project consultants, committee members, and research partners.

I greatly appreciate Sue Snyder’s work on creating this newsletter and for all of her work with processing adjunct faculty member appointments and reappointments and all related documents. A list of adjunct faculty members is at http://nursing.unc.edu/departments/outreach/adjunct.html. If you would like to know all of the adjunct faculty members that we have by a specific clinical area, just send Sue or I a note and we can send that information to you. Or, if you would like a read-only version of the adjunct faculty database on your desktop computer, just let us know and we will submit that request.

For those who serve as a partnering faculty member to our adjunct faculty members--thank you! We rely on the communication you maintain with your adjunct faculty member so that person knows how best to contribute to the mission of our school and be involved actively on an ongoing basis.

Unless we hear otherwise, we plan on sending out a similar newsletter twice a year with adjunct faculty member achievements, new appointments, and reappointments. Please send us your feedback on this newsletter or your suggestions to better strengthen the partnerships we have with our adjunct faculty members. Our adjunct faculty members want to be involved, they want to participate on committees or other projects, and they welcome the opportunity to give their time and talents to our school!

To strong partnerships!
